Market Review

- Peso bond yields skyrocketed over the month, though front-end yields were somewhat shielded from this move. Short-term bond indices moved flat over the month.
- Rising US yields were the primary catalyst for the hit on yields 5Y and longer, while still-abundant liquidity continued to keep the front end of the curve anchored (rising only 10-20 bps).
- The Bureau of Treasury also issued a 3Y Retail Treasury Bond priced at 2.375%, while initially giving a good premium over secondary market levels, the extreme rise in yields have eroded the premium. Issue date is March 9, 2021.
- Philippine February inflation printed higher than the January figure with a +4.7% increase year-on-year.
- The Prosperity GS Fund (-0.95%) lagged the year-to-date return of its benchmark (-0.60%) due to its overweight duration position.
