OTHER DISCLOSURES

OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review.

Global fixed income markets gained by 2.64% during the first quarter of 2025, with the month of February posting the strongest returns. The yield on the 10-year U.S. Treasury bond declined significantly over the quarter, moving from 4.57% at the end of December to 4.21% by the end of March, though it experienced notable volatility throughout the period.

U.S. inflation showed mixed signals during the quarter. After rising for four consecutive months from September's low of 2.4% year-on-year, CPI inflation finally moderated in February to 2.8% year-on-year, down from January's 3.0%. Month-on-month inflation was particularly volatile, accelerating to +0.5% in January (the highest since August 2023) before moderating to +0.2% in February. Core inflation, which excludes food and energy, fluctuated between 3.1% and 3.3% year-on-year throughout the quarter, remaining well above the Federal Reserve's 2% target.

With these developments, the U.S. Federal Reserve maintained its cautious stance with regard to its policy rate and paused rate cuts in its January meeting. The inflation outlook was further complicated by U.S. President Donald Trump's tariffs on U.S. imports, which contributed to much of the market volatility during the quarter. The tariff announcements prompted investors to rotate into fixed income assets during the quarter.
