Market Review

- Global equities and fixed income diverged in the month of October, with equities rallying 5.12% while fixed income was flattish at -0.24%. Major equity indices delivered positive results, led by the U.S. at 6.97%, Europe at 4.67%, and Asia ex Japan rounding out the group with a 1.36% gain
- Inflation concerns intensified on the back of supply chain bottlenecks, and a global commodity boom that has put pressure on both producers and consumers. Stronger inflation could hamper global demand and put in peril the fragile global economic recovery.
- The October FOMC meeting was highlighted by the announcement of the tapering of the asset-purchase program of the FED starting November 2021. Target reduction would be -US$ 10Bn in treasuries and US$ 5Bn in MBS purchases per month. While monetary policy remains accommodative, outright rate hikes may commence as early as 2H 2022.
- Chinese equities were relatively flat in October, ending at 0.02% (in USD terms) and -0.58% (at CNY terms). Increasing regulatory concerns, a power crisis, default risk in the property sector and a slowing economy weighed on the minds of investors
